The United States drops an atomic bomb on Hiroshima, Japan, killing at least 66,000 people and injuring 69,000. Many are vaporized. Three days later, a nuclear bomb is dropped on Nagasaki, with similar results.

When Sarah Tolson let the disc fly from her hand at the U.S. Track and Field National Junior Olympics last Thursday, she knew it was good.

She jumped up and down, mindful of staying inside the throwing ring until the one kilogram discus plopped back to earth, but there was that momentary delay before she realized just how good the throw was.

First, the screen flashed the distance in meters: 44.83. Then, finally, in feet: 147 even, a personal best for the Pawhuska High School junior, and a throw that cinched her title as a national champion, 12 feet nine inches farther than the second-place finisher. "I was so excited," Tolson said. "She knew that was it," said her father, Steve Tolson. "She did a great job, and she stayed cool."

Tolson's championship in Greensboro, N.C., is the culmination of a boatload of hard work not only over the summer but since she started throwing discus for the "neck of it" in the 7th grade under Pawhuska coach Olivia Chronister.

Her natural talent shone through, and she worked her way up to becoming the No. 3 sophomore discus thrower in the nation this spring. She also won gold the Oklahoma State 3A championship in May packed, but short

Barnsdall is hamstrung by the fact it has only two members of the City Council until an election can be held to replace two councilmen, one of whom died and the other of whom resigned.

The net effect at Tuesday's meeting: A crowd of 20 in attendance, none allowed to speak what was on his or her mind because, as Mayor J.D. Cole put it, the city can do nothing but limp along and pay purchase orders and deal with emergencies.

One of those emergencies Tuesday was to award a bid to start work on the 1st Street sewer main replacement to MSB Construction for $93,160. Council members Ahnawake Mashunkashay and Vernon Barkley also voted to approve calling for a special election on Oct 13 to fill the seats vacated by Kenny Thomas and Bob Infield, as well as the posts of City Marshal and street commissioner. Candidates must file Aug. 24-26 at the Osage County Election Board in Pawhuska.

In other business, the city has hired a new attorney: Shannon Edwards, a Georgetown University graduate and Osage Nation Congresswoman whose family owns the land surrounding Big Hole north of Barnsdall.

Edwards, a former Department of Justice attorney, now works at Monnet, Hayes, Bullis, Thompson & Edwards, a law firm in Oklahoma City. She also maintains a home in Pawhuska. She replaces John Heskett, who resigned without notice last month.

Catlett, Sanford and Smith: All arrested in Bartlesville after a burglary and a high-speed chase.

Local men face felony charges in B-ville

Two Barnsdall men and another from Avant were arrested last Tuesday after a four-mile chase through Bartlesville, where they were reported to have stolen high-dollar car wheels and tires from a residential garage.

Arrested were Kenneth Smith, 20, of Avant, Cody Sanford, 19, of Barnsdall, and Clayton Catlett, 22, also of Barnsdall. Smith faces six counts, five of them felonies: Burglary, conspiracy, possession of stolen property, evading arrest, two counts of running a road block and one misdemeanor charge of resisting an officer. The men from Barnsdall face three felony charges and one misdemeanor: Burglary, conspiracy, possession of stolen property and resisting.

According to a probable cause affidavit filed in Washington County District Court, Bartlesville Police Officer Lenard Ames Jr. responded to a call of a burglary in progress on July 31 in the 400 block of Yale. The caller said that three men had stolen wheels and tires from the house and left in a later model red pickup truck. Moment later, Ames said he spotted the truck heading south on Madison Boulevard, being driven by Smith. The stolen wheels and tires were visible in the bed of the truck.

Ames turned around to stop the truck, which quickly made a right turn onto May Lane then accelerated, prompting a high-speed pursuit that went on for four miles in residential and commercial neighborhoods. The truck finally stopped on Comanche and the three occupants fled on foot. All three were nabbed after a foot chase.

Sanford recently was arrested in Barnsdall and charged, along with three other people, with assaulting a man with a baseball bat. He has denied the charges and said that the man attacked a friend's father and the accused assailants acted only in self-defense. Eyewitnesses disagree with that version of the

Coming home

For almost a year, the seven members of the Payton family of Pawhuska have raised money and shoveled through paperwork to add two new brothers to their fold. And now, their dream is realized. Jacky and Marie Payton, along with sons Gavin and Garrett, are in Russian finalizing the adoptions of orphans Lasha and Alexei.

The family and its newest members are due to arrive in Tulsa at 10:23 p.m. Thursday on an American Airlines flight from Chicago. A surprise welcome is planned for them, with well-wishers gathering at the airport at 10 p.m.

The Paytons, who already have three adopted American children - two boys and a girl - and two biological sons, fell in love with Lasha when he came for a visit as part of the Russian Lighthouse Orphan Project, a mission. They decided to adopt Alexei, too, after they learned he would be kicked out on the streets at the age of 16, in a year.

with a throw of 132 feet nine inches.

Since school let out, Tolson has been working with her trainer, Caleb Seal of Owasso, throwing an hour or two each day in Owasso or Pawhuska, and doing light weight training.

She has also been competing at other national events. She won the discus event at the Great Southwest meet in Albuquerque and placed third at the USATF Youth World Trials in Ypsilanti, Mich. That third place finish was a heartbreaker, eight feet and six inches behind the No. 2 placer Erica Brand, and the bronze meant she did not win a berth on Team USA and a trip to Italy to compete in the world championship that began three days later.

For this year, the competitions are done,
